

Stuart Allardyce is a social worker who is involved with managing two Barnardo's services working with children who display harmful sexual behaviour and children who have been affected by sexual abuse. He is also seconded to the Centre for Youth and Criminal Justice at Strathclyde University where he has a lead in relation to youth justice work with young people involved with sexual offending. Stuart is the chair of NOTA Scotland, has worked with young people who display harmful sexual behaviour for over 10 years.

His most recent publication is Allardyce, S. and Yates P. (2013) Assessing Risk of Victim Crossover with Children and Young People who Display Harmful Sexual Behaviours, Child Abuse Review. 22 255-267